General Description of the Purkeville Hydropathic Institut General Description of the Parkeville Hydropathic Institute.

The main building is three stories high, standing back from the street about one hundred feet, with a semicircular grass plot in front, and contains thirty to forty rooms. The grounds around the house are tastefully laid out with walks and planted with trees, shrubs, &c. On the left of the entrance to these grounds is a cottage containing four rooms, used by male patients as a bathing house, with every convenience for "packing," bathing, &c.; on the right of the entrance, about two hundred feet distant, stands a similar cottage, used by the ladies for similar purposes.

In the rear of the Institute, at the distance of one hun In the rear of the institute, at the distance of the indered feet, are three other cottages, some eightly feet apart. One of these is the laundry, with a hydrant at the door; the other two are occupied by the servants.

The hydrant water is introduced into these cottages as well as into the main building, and all the waste water carried off by drains under ground.

well as into the main building, and all the waste water carried off by drains under ground.

THE WATER WORES

Consist of a circular stone building, standing on the brow of a hill, surmounted by a large cedar reservoir containing five hundred barrels, brought from a never-failing spring of pure cold water in the side of the hill, by "a hydraulic ram," a self-acting machine of cast iron, that is kept constantly going, night and day, by the descent of the water from the spring. The surplus water is carried from the reservoir to a fountain in the water-works yard, surrounded by weeping willows. In the first story of the waterworks is a circular room, containing the douche bath, which is a stream falling from a height of about thirty feet, and can be varied in size from half an inch to an inch and a half in diameter. Adjoining the douche room is a dreading room, with marble tables, &c.; the rising douche (for the cure of piles, &c.) is one of the most complete contrivances of the kind, being entirely under the control of the patient using the same.

There are many other appliances, which can be better understood by a personal examination.

To Persons out of Employment. NEW PICTORIAL WORKS. Just published by R. SEARS, and for sale at No. 128 Nassau street, New York.

A MERICAN GIFT BOOKS FOR 1861.—Agents are wanted to circulate the following new and beautiful works, (retail price, $2.50 per vol.) A new and complete PICTORIAL HISTORY OF CHINA AND INDIA; with a descriptive account of those countries and their inhabitants, from the earliest period of authentic history to the present time. In which the editor has treated not only of the historical events, but also of the manners, customs, religion, literature, and domestic habits of the people of those immense empires.

The embellishments are about two hundred, and of the first order, illustrating whatever is peculiar to the inhabitants, regarding their dress, domestic occupations, their mode of agriculture, commercial pursuits, arts, &c. They are accurate, and each one has been made expressly for the work.

The volume forms a large octave, containing between five and six hundred pages, printed in the best style, and on good substantial white paper. It is furnished to agents, handsomely bound in muslin, gilt, or leather, as the purchaser may prefer, at a very liberal discount, when quantities of not less than twenty copies are ordered at one time.

SEARS' PICTORIAL FAMILY PUBLICATIONS are decidedly the best books that agents can possibly employ their time in supplying to the people of the United States. They are valuable for reference, and should be possessed by every family in this great republic. There is not a city or town in these United States, not even those of small importance, but contains many citizens to whom these works are indispersable. They are adapted to the literary wants of the Christian, the patriot, the statesman, and the domestic circle, got up in a superior style of art and workmanship; and are not only such books as will sell, but are such as an agent of good principle will feel free to recommend, and willing to see the purchaser again after they have been bought.

OUR PLAN.—The plan the publisher has so successfully carried out for several years, is the obtaining responsible men as agents, who are well known in their own-counfies, towns, and villages, and have time and disposition to circulate good and instructive books among their neighbors and friends. Any person wishing to embark in the enterprise will risk little in sending $25 or $50, for which he will receive an assortment as he may direct, at the wholesale cash prices.

Enterprising and active men of respectability and good will receive an assortment as he had, sale cash prices.

Enterprising and active men of respectability and good address, would do well to engage in the sale of the above volumes; and all postmasters, elergymen, book pedlars, and newspaper agents, are respectfully requested to act as our agents. A handsome remuneration allowed to all who engage in their sale. For particulars address, post prid, ROBERT SEARS, 128 Nassau street, N. Y. To publishers of newspapers throughout the United States:

Drinking in quietness, peace, and content; So is the bird on the light branches swinging, Idly its carol of gratitude singing, Only on living and loving intent.

Indolent! indolent! yes, I am indolent! So is the cloud overhanging the mountain; So is the tremulous wave of a fountain, Uttering softly its eloquent psalm: Nerve and sensation in quiet reposing, Silent as blossoms the night-dew is closing, But the full heart beating strongly and calm.

Indolent! indolent! yes, I am indolent! If it be idle to gather my pleasure Out of creation's uncoveted treasure Midnight and morning—by forest and sea: Lonely in Autumn's forlorn lamentation-Hopeful and happy with Spring and the bee.

Indolent! indolent! are ye not indolent? Thralls of the earth, and its usages weary; Toiling like gnomes where the darkness is dreary, Toiling, and sinning, to heap up your gold.
Stiffing the heavenward breath of devotion; Crushing the freshness of every emotion; Hearts like the dead, that are pulseless and cold!

Indolent! indolent! art thou not indolent? Thou who art living unloving and lonely, Wrapped in a pall that will cover thee only-Shrouded in selfishness, piteous ghost! Sad eyes behold thee, and angels are weeping O'er thy forsaken and desolate sleeping; Art thou not indolent?—art thou not lost?

From the Union of this morning. The London Times and Ocean Steam Navigation.

To the Editor of the Union.

SIR: Enclosed you will find a communication as published in the London Times, by Mr. John S. Cunningham, now at the World's Fair as commissioner for the State of Virginia, which fully tells its own story. It appears therefrom that the Times—acknowledged to be THE newspaper of England, if not of Europe—ventured to put before the world, there assembled, the preension that England was the pioneer in Atlantic steam navigation. This has been promptly met and contradicted by my son, with the most incontestable proof, which goes to show that America was not only the first to apply steam to navigation, but that she is also entitled to the credit of having first navigated the Atlantic by steam, as well as being the FASTEST at the present day (vide late trip of the Pacific, one of the Collins line of steamers) on that element which Britannia has long boasted being the mistress of. I take the liberty of asking a place in your columns for this and the paper attached, as an important item in American history, which will no doubt be interesting to the American render, and may have passed from the mind of the public generally.

Very respectfully, yours, &c.

A. F. CUNNINGHAM.

THE FIRST STEAMSHIP THAT CROSSED THE ATLANTIC.

To the Editor of the Times.

Sin: In your potential journal of the 22d instant, the following statement occurs in an article descriptive of machinery in the great exhibition: "About 1836-287 the project of exhibition: "About 1836-37 the project of crossing the Atlantic was started; the Sirius was, we believe, the first steam vessel which performed this feat."

On referring to the Times of June 21, 1819, you will find the following paragraph, credited to Marwade's Commercial Report for that week: Among the arrivals yesterday at this port we were particularly gratified and astonished breast. "He has seen better days."
by the novel sight of a fine steamship, which I could not answer, for my heart was full. came round at 71, p. m., without the assistance of a single sheet, in a style which displayed the power and advantage of the application of steam to vessels of the largest size, being 350 tons burden. She is called the Savannah, Captain Rogers, and sailed from Savannah (Georgia, United States) the 26th of May, and arrived in the channel five days since. During her passage she worked the engine eighteen Her model is beautiful, and the accommodations for passengers elegant and complete.

She is the first ship on this construction that has undertaken a voyage across the Atlantic." The Times of June 30, 1819, says: "The Savannah steam-vessel, recently arrived at Liverpool from America-the first vessel of the kind that ever crossed the Atlantic-was chased a whole day off the coast of Ireland by the Kite revenue cruiser, on the Cork station, which mistook her for a ship on fire.' Lloyd's list reports the arrival of the Savannah at Liverpool on the 20th of June, 1819, bound to Petersburg : and in Gore's Annals of Liverpool you will find this American steamer's arrival recorded among remarkable events. The steamship Savannah was an American ship-built, owned and navigated by Americans. Francis Ficket, of New York, built her for Daniel Dodd; and the engines were made by Stephen Vail, of Morristown. She was comnmanded by Captain Moses Rogers, and navi-gated by Stephen Rogers, of New London, Connecticut, who is still living to see the same voyage performed in less than half the time by a line of American steamers, the chief engineer of one of which (the Atlantic, Captain West) is his nephew, J. W. Rogers. It is not inappropriate to mention that, at the present writing, the quickest trip across the ocean has been made by the Pacific, one of the Collins line of American steamers, in less than ten days; so that we are not only the first but the fastest. In England, Copenhagen, Stockholm, St. Petersburg, and Constantinople, the arrival of the steamer Savannah excited great curiosity and attracted thousands of visiters. The King of Sweden presented Captain Rogers with a muller;" and the Emperor of Russia presented a "silver tea-kettle as a token of the child was dead. Did he indeed hear angel's his gratification at the first attempt to cross the Atlantic by steam." Lord Lynedoch, of England, who went passenger in this ship to St. Petersburg, presented Stephen Rogers with a "superb gold snuff-box." All these testimonials, are now in the possession of the family. The log-book, containing an official account of the voyage, is in the National Institute at Washington city, and may be seen at any time. Very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

THE ORPHAN BOY. A TOUCHING STORY.

The bustle of the fight was over; the prisoners had been secured, and the decks washed down, and the schooner had once more relapsed into midnight's quiet repose. I sought my hammock and soon fell asleep. But my slumbers were disturbed by wild dreams, which, lik visions of a fever, agitated and unnerved me. The last strife, the hardships of my early life, and a thousand other things, mingled together as figures in phantasmagoria. Sud-denly a hand was laid on my shoulder, and starting up I beheld the surgeon's mate.

"Little Dick, sir, is dying," said he.
At once I sprung from my hammock—little Dick was a sort of protege of mine. He was a pale, delicate child, said to be an orphan, and of a gentle nature; and from the first hour I joined the schooner my heart yearned towards him; for I, too, had once been friendless and alone in the world. He had often talked to me in confidence of his mether, whose memory he in confidence of his mother, whose memory he regarded with holy reverence, while to the other boys of the ship he had little to say: for they were rude and coarse—he delicate and sensitive. Often when they jeered him for his melancholy, he would go apart by himself and weep. He never complained of his lot, though his companions imposed on him continually. Poor lad! his heart was in the grave with his lost parent.

I took a strong interest in him, and had lightened his task as much as possible. During the late fight I had owed my life to him, for he rushed just as a sabre stroke was levelled at me; and by interposing his feeble cutlass he diverted a deadly blow. In the hurry and con-fusion since, I had quite forgotten to inquire whether he was hurt, though at the time I had inwardly resolved to exert all my influence to procure him a midshipman's warrant in requital for his service. It was with a pang of reproachful agony, therefore, I leapt to my feet.

"My God!" I exclaimed, "you don't mean it? He is not dying?"

"I fear, sir," said the surgeon, shaking his head sadly, "that he cannot live till morning."

"And I have been lying idle here," I exclaimed with remorse. "Lead me to him." "He is delirious, but at intervals of lunacy he asks for you, sir;" and as the man spoke, we stood beside the bed of the boy.

The sufferer did not lay in his hammock, as it was hung in the very midst of the crew, and the close air around it was so stifling that he had been carried under the open hatchway, and laid there in a little open space of about four feet square. From the sound of the ripples I judged the vessel was in motion, while the clear calm blue sky, seen through the opening overhead, and dotted with myriads of stars, be tokened the fog had broken away. How calm had it smiled down on the wan face of the dying boy. Occasionally a light current of windoh! how deliciously cool in that pent-up hole—eddied down the hatchway, and lifted the dark, chesnut locks of the sufferer, as, with his head oh! how deliciously cool in that pent-up hole—eddied down the hatchway, and lifted the dark, chesnut locks of the sufferer, as, with his head reposing on the lap of an old veteran, he lay in an unquiet slumber. His shirt-collar was unbuttoned, and his childish bosom, white as that of a girl, was opened and exposed. He breathed of a girl, was opened and exposed. He breathed quick and heavily. The wound of which he was dying was intensely painful, but within the last half-hour had somewhat lulled, though even now his thin fingers tightly grasped the bed-clothes, as if he suffered the greatest agony.

A battled-stained and gray-haired seaman stood beside him, holding a dull lantern in his hand, and gazed sorrowfully down upon the suf-ferer. The surgeon knelt with his finger on the boy's pulse. As I approached they all looked up—the veteran who held him shook his head, and would have spoken, but the tears gathered too chokingly in his eyes.

The surgeon said-"He is going fast—poor little fellow. Do you see this?" And as he spoke, he lifted up a rich golden locket which laid on the boy's

Here was the being to whom a few hours before I owed my life—a poor, slight, unprotected child—lying before me with death already written upon his brow—and yet I had never sought him out after the conflict. How bitterly my heart reproached me at that hour. They noticed my agitation, and his old friend, the seaman who held his head, said sadly-"Poor little Dick! you'll never see the shore you have wished for so long. But there'll be more than one when your log's out"-he spoke with emotion—"to mourn for you."

Suddenly the little fellow opened his eyes, and looked vacantly around. "Has he come yet?" he asked in a low voice. Why don't he come ?"

"I am here," said I, taking the little fellow hand. "Don't you know me, Dick?"
He smiled faintly in my face. He then said-"You have been kind to me, sir-kinder to me than most people are to a poor orphan boy. I have no way to show my gratitude unless you will take the Bible you will find in my trunk.

It's a small offering, I know, but it's all I have. I burst into tears : he resumed-"Doctor, I'm dying, ain't I?" said the little "Poetor, 'I'm dying, and 'I' said the little fellow, "for my sight grows dim. God bless you, Mr. Worth!"
"Can I do nothing for you, Dick?" said I.
"You saved my life. I would coin my blood to save yours. 'I have nothing to ask-I don't want to liveonly if it is possible, let me be buried by my mother—you'll find the name of the place and all about it in my trunk." "Anything, everything, my poor lad," I answered chokingly.

The little fellow smiled faintly—it was an angel's smile-but he did not answer. His eyes were fixed on the stars flickering in that patch of the blue sky overhead. His mind wandered. "It's a long, long way up there, but there are bright angels among them. Mother used to say we should meet there. How near they come, and I see sweet faces smiling on me from among them. Hark! is that music?" and lifting his finger he seemed listening for a moment. He fell back, and the old veteran burst into tears-

The wife of Joseph D. Curry, of Versailles, Indiana, died very suddenly, not long since, and from some circumstance attending her disease, it was suspected that she had been poisoned by her husband. Upon an examination being made, a quantity of poison was found in her stomach and there is no doubt but that the dose was given her by the hand that was sworn to her protection. She was Curry's third wife, and it was thought that he had used similar means to She was Curry's third wife, and it rid himself of the two former.

AMERICAN NAMES.—On looking over the new Official List of Post Offices in the United States, we find most remarkable instances of repetition in the naming of places—going far to illustrate that poverty of imagination with which we are sometimes charged by discriminating foreigners.
The same process has already commenced on the Pacific coast, and their Portlands, Milwaukies, and New-Yorks-of-the-Pacific usurp the place of more appropriate and euphonious names. The great lack of invention which this constant repetition implies, is also shown by the avidity with which new names are appropriated. For instance, there are already ten Fillmores and eleven Fremonts. There are only seven Rough-and-Readys, but had Gen. Taylor lived to the present time the number would have been much larger. Of other national names, there are twenty-five Washingtons, twenty-four Franklins, fifteen Jeffersons, and thirteen Lafayettes.

A Noble Project .- We are informed that the Odd Fellows of the northern district of this State have in contemplation the establishment of an asylum in this city, for the care and education of the orphans of deceased members of the Order. It is proposed that an assessment of one dollar be made upon each of the twentyfive thousand members of the Order in the district for the first year, half a dollar for the second year, and afterward a quarter of a dollar annually, which it is thought will raise a sufficient sum to build an asylum and keep it in operation. The project is a grand one, and it is to be hoped will be carried out.

[Syracuse Journal. There is a rumor now in circulation in Boston, that a bottle has been picked up upon the beach, at East Boston, containing a piece of paper, upon which is written the words, "The light-house is now careening; one sea more will carry us over.—Wilson." Wilson, it will be remembered, was the name of one of the assistant keepers who perished with the destruction of the light-house.

The offence of child-stripping is now practised to a great extent in Liverpool. On one day no less than five children were robbed of their boots and other articles, and every day many cases are reported to the police, who are on the alert, the children being too young in many instances to describe the parties, who principally appear to be beggars.

DIFFERING WITH ST. PAUL.-A very good story is told of an individual who formerly resided in this city. He was a little unscrupulous in his operations—at least, he was not in the habit of boasting much of his honesty or regard for principle. One day, a pious friend of his ventured to reprove him for something he had said.

"Don't you know, sir," said the pions man, that St. Paul says you shouldn't do evil that good may come ?" "Why yes," replied the individual addressed, "but in that respect St. Paul and I differ."

A LATE BREAKFAST .- The Canadian Parliament in session at Toronto adjourned one day last week at five p. m., to breakfast. The Montreal Courier thus notices the matter: "This refers to a public breakfast given by the Earl and Countess of Elgin, on Wednesday evening, at five p. m. A breakfast at five o'clock in the evening! A very ingenious device to save the governor-general's port, which, after all, is reported not to be of the vintage. We wonder when the Earl and Countess of Elgin dine? Our staid, sober ancestors used to sit down to that meal at the meridian. Two o'clock then became the fashionable hour, whence it crept on later and later, until it reached six, seven and eight o'clock in the evening, which gave occasion for the sage remark of an Irish butler, that he believed 'the gintry would, by-and-by, put off their dinner till to-
